FOUR CHILDREN DEAD AFTER FLAMES RAZE JERSEY FARM HOUSE

Mother Burned In Attempted Rescue; Victims
Trapped On Second Floor By Blaze;
Overheated Stove Blamed

PAULSBORO, N. J., March 18. — Four children were burned to death early today in a fire which destroyed their home, a two-story frame structure on Crown Point Road, about fifteen miles from Camden. The fire is believed to have started from an overheated stove.

The victims:
Theresa Bell, 15,
Mary, her sister, 8,
Ruth, another sister, 4,
William, a brother, eight months old.

Mrs. Lillian Bell, 38, mother of the children, was badly burned in trying to rescue them.
Charles Blackman, a neighbor, noticed the fire, while walking near his home, ran to the Bell house and aroused Mrs. Bell. The father, William Bell, a mechanic, was at work.

Mrs. Bell aroused the sleeping children and told them to follow her. She groped her way to the first floor, then discovered the children were not behind her. She screamed and tried to return, but neighbors prevented that. The bodies of the four children were found in the ruins.

TRAPPER TO CONFER ABOUT EXPEDITION TO RESCUE FAWCETT

Story Told Of Discovery

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 18.—Stephan Rattin, Swiss trapper, who believes he found the long lost Colonel P. H. Fawcett held captive by Indians in the Brazilian jungle, was expected here today to confer on rescue plans in which lives of the rescuers would be risked.

Rattin told the United Press at Sao Paulo he had been called here by the British consul general at Sao Paulo, Arthur Abbott, considered Rattin's story the most definite clue to Col. Fawcett's fate since the explorer, his son and a young English companion, Raleigh Rimell, were swallowed by the jungles seven years ago in their search for a "lost civilization."

Rattin told how a white man, garbed in Indian dress, had approached him at an Indian village and whispered the word "Englishman." Later, Rattin said, the man said he was Col. Fawcett.

Rattin is considering re-entering the great, green wastes of the Mato Grosso (Great Jungle) country to rescue Fawcett. The territory has been penetrated by few white men. It contains the thickest and densest jungle growth in the vast Brazilian hinterland infested by wild beasts, pestilence, poisonous snakes and insects and hostile Indians.

Rattin said he planned an expedition of four men, as a small group had "more chances to exist and get through wastes where maps and charts are of no value."

Explorers who have seen horses or men fall into streams in the jungle say they were devoured before their eyes by hordes of small and almost invisible fish that destroy their prey with great speed.

Rattin said he had several native jungle trackers in mind as possible members of his party.

If Rattin back trails over the route he followed from the point where he believes he saw Col. Fawcett, the journey would take about three months.

Rattin said the greatest difficulty after finding the village of the Murcelagos tribe where he believes Col. Fawcett is held prisoner would be in persuading the natives to free their captive, then to get him safely out of the Indian country. He recalled that the headman of the Indian village where the tall, bearded white man whispered "Englishman" to him kept a jealous guard over the white man. Rattin spent four days at the village before he could talk with the prisoner.

The trapper held little hope that the white man could escape without aid. He told Rattin he had been a prisoner for more than five years and never moved about the jungle except in the custody of the Indians.

STATE CLOSES CASE IN INDIAN MURDER

GLOBE, Ariz., March 18.—Counsel for Gohney "Mac" Seymour prepared today to counter his purported murder confession with the charge a sophisticated New York girl brought about her own destruction by playing on the emotions of a credulous and childlike Indian boy.

The simple, native language of the document, in which Seymour is charged with presenting his version of the death of Henrietta Schmerler, Columbia University student, was attacked by John P. Dougherty, defense attorney.

The government closed its case after a bitter legal battle over admission of the statement.

LINGUIST PROTESTS UNEMPLOYMENT BY STARVING HIMSELF

University Graduate Chooses Death To Small Salary

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Refusing a temporary job, Dr. Frederick F. Wolter, 37, holder of three university degrees, today entered the nineteenth day of his starvation protest against unemployment.

Wolter, a trained librarian and master of eight languages, says he is determined to starve himself to death unless he is offered a permanent "suitable" position.

The temporary job offered Wolter was cataloging some books in a college library at $15 a week. Wolter declared the salary was too low, and besides "it would not accomplish anything."

He denied, however, that his self-imposed starvation should be considered as suicide. He said:

"My action must not be regarded as an attempt at suicide but as the logical course of action required by circumstance. I am ready to break my fast as soon as a suitable position is assured me or means of a decent, though frugal, livelihood are placed at my disposal."

"If I am destined to a life of starvation, I prefer to starve rapidly."

"To take up this course of action I not only consider it my personal right, but my prescribed duty as an American citizen, in order to arouse the public conscience by directing attention to social abuses and thus giving an impetus to reforms."

Authorities agreed that Wolter had a legal right to starve himself to death if he wanted to do so. W. W. Bridge, District of Columbia counsel, looked up the law and found no statutes or precedents which would permit the police or agencies to interfere.

Wolter today weighed 126 pounds, having lost about one pound daily since he began fasting. He has had to give up walking outdoors.

"BLUEBEARD" SLAYER MUST HANG

Powers May Be Linked
With Woman's Death
In Illinois

NORRIS, Ill., March 18.—An eleventh hour accusation was made here today linking Harry Powers, West Virginia "Bluebeard," with a slaying similar to that for which he is scheduled to hang tonight.

Powers, convicted of luring to death Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke of Northboro, Mass., through his matrimonial agency, has been ordered executed at 8 p. m. tonight.

The story was told by Mrs. J. B. Dawson, rooming house keeper, in an effort to solve the murder of an unidentified woman whose body was found trussed in a sack on a country road near here on Labor Day, 1929.

Mrs. Dawson said she recognized Powers from newspaper photographs as the man who rented a garage from her July 20, 1929. He asked, she said, for a dirt-floored garage. The man said he was a paint salesman from Clarksburg, W. Va., and later, according to the story, borrowed a shovel from Mrs. Dawson.

"I noticed an odor of decaying flesh about the garage," Mrs. Dawson said, "but thought it was a dead dog. On the day before Labor Day this man again borrowed my shovel and when he returned it there was the same odor about it. When I went to question him, he was gone. After this woman's body was found, I inspected the garage and found remnants of a woman's clothing and garter buckles partly buried in a pile of ashes."

When pictures of Powers first appeared, Mrs. Dawson kept silent fearing publicity but later told her story to Coroner T. A. Hoganson who investigated.

Hoganson is now at Mountville, W. Va., to question Powers.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 18.—Harry F. Powers, "Bluebeard" killer accused of hanging or strangling five persons, is scheduled to die on the gallows tonight for the murder of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke of Northboro, Mass., lured by mail order promises of marriage.

Powers' last hope for a reprieve faded last night when Governor William G. Conley overruled a telephone plea by J. Ed. Law, Clarksburg attorney, Law defended the bearded Powers.

Powers was convicted after a sensational trial held in Clarksburg opera house because the court house was too small.

He admitted that he and Mrs. Lemke had driven here from Massachusetts after he had promised her a "big farm in the west." But he denied that he killed the buxom Mrs. Lemke. He said she told him she preferred another man, a "Cecil Johnson."

The last he saw of Mrs. Lemke, Powers claimed, was when she "said goodbye to me to go with him."

Mrs. Lemke's body was one of five dug up from a shallow drainage ditch back of Powers' garage at his quiet Dell home near Clarksburg. The others were bodies of Mrs. Asta Bulck, Elcher and her three children of Oak Park, Ill.

BANDITS LOOT OHIO VILLAGE BANK FRIDAY

Obtain $10,000 In Cash
In Daring
Robbery

PROSPER, O., March 18.—Three men entered the Prospect Citizens Bank today, held up the president, cashier and two bank examiners and escaped with approximately $10,000 in cash. Two citizens fired at the robbers' motor car as it sped from the Marion County town.

R. W. Herbst, president of the bank; D. H. Gast, cashier; G. B. Lonsway, of Tiffin and C. B. Housner, Upper Sandusky, bank examiners, were working in the bank when the robbers entered.

"Put up your hands, we're taking over this place now," the men said.

One bandit covered Herbst and the two examiners. The men took all the money in sight then looted a safe which they forced Herbst to open. John Walker, a Prospect resident, walked in while the hold-up was in progress. He ran out and gave an alarm.

Marshal Ed Fritsch, who had been notified of the hold-up and H. E. Osborn, drug store proprietor, opened fire on the three men as they drove west on state route 68.

Chauncey Olcott Dies; Famed As Irish Tenor

Ballad Singer Had Introduced Many Popular
Songs

MONTE CARLO, March 18.—Chauncey Olcott, famous ballad singer, who introduced the song "Mother Machree," died early today from pernicious anemia. He was 71 years old.

Olcott's wife, son and daughter were at his bedside at his villa here. The body of the singer-actor will be buried in New York, they said.

Olcott was a native of Buffalo, N. Y., where he was born July 21, 1860. He was developed as a singer by the late R. M. Hooley and became famous as the "Irish tenor."

He married Margaret O'Donovan of San Francisco in 1897, travelled with Hooley's company several years, appeared with various minstrel and opera troupes, and then went to England to sing in comic opera.

Olcott succeeded W. J. Scanlan as star in Irish musical dramas and returned to introduce "Mother Machree," the greatest song hit of his career.

Other Irish songs which Olcott made famous before his serious illness in 1925 included "I Love the Name of Mary," "A Little Bit of Heaven, Sure They Call It Ireland," "My Wild Irish Rose," "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," and many more sentimental ballads of that type.

"A Little Bit of Heaven" which Olcott sang in "Barry of Barrymore," ended with the life that he became famous in many parts of the world: "And when they had it finished, sure they called it Ireland."

Olcott always had to sing "My Wild Irish Rose" no matter in what play he appeared:

"My wild Irish rose, the sweetest flower that grows
You may search everywhere but none can compare
With my wild Irish rose,
My wild Irish rose, the sweetest flower that grows"

And some day for my sake she may let me take
The bloom from my wild Irish rose

In "The Heart of Paddy Whack," Olcott introduced "When Irish Eyes are Smiling":

"Sure Irish eyes are smiling
Sure its like a morn in spring
In the ill of Irish laughter you can hear the angels sing
When Irish hearts are happy all the world seems bright and gay
And when Irish eyes are smiling, sure they steal your heart away."

"Mother Machree" was the most famous of Olcott's songs, and he introduced it in "Rugged Robin":
"Sure I love the dear silver that shines in your hair
And the brown that's all furrowed and wrinkled with care
I kiss the dear fingers all toil-worn for me
May God bless you and keep you, mother machree."

THREE KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

DAYTON, O., Mar. 18.—Three persons were fatally injured when an auto crashed into a parked truck near Brookville, Montgomery County last night.

The dead are Mrs. Goldie Somers, 45, her daughter Marjorie, 17, and Herbert Oehler, 22. All the victims are from West Manchester, O.

Two other occupants, Rowland Stock, the driver and his 13-year-old son escaped with minor injuries. Stock said he was blinded by the lights of another car and misjudged the distance.

LEGION WILL VOTE ON COMPENSATION

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 18.—The 469 American Legion posts in Ohio prepared today to take a vote on whether the remaining 50 percent of the adjusted compensation certificates should be paid by the government at once.

Paul M. Herbert, state commander, directed that the poll be taken.

He advised posts to vote on the question of either a regular or special meeting.

Returns are to be made to J. J. Saslavsky, state adjutant of the Legion.

The ninth district of the organization, composed of thirteen Ohio posts, recently went on record as favoring a poll of members.

KIDNAPING SEARCH BECOMES ROUTINE; SEARCHERS CONFER

Little Hope Placed On Recent Cues; Suspect Held

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 18.—State police announced today they have located two German servants who disappeared from the home of Leandro Lightfoot at Franklin Park immediately after the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. The couple whose names were listed as Mr. and Mrs. Engstengbergs, were being questioned today. It was not revealed where they had been located.

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 18.—Routine investigation of hundreds of reports, including two from the far west, continued today after Colonel Lindbergh's secret night conference with leaders in the hunt for his kidnapped baby.

One report was from Pocahontas, Idaho, to the effect that a suspect in another case there had said he drove the kidnaper's car. The report was considered by some to be a flippant boast.

The second far west report was based on a question asked Colonel H. Norman Schwartzkopf, and involved a further check of activities of Denver gangsters.

Practically all other "leads" were considered useless; even the investigation of two German servants who left their jobs near Franklin Park the day after the kidnaping was believed to be a more or less perfunctory checkup.

Reports of clues in the Bronx, and in West Point, Conn., were unfounded, a police statement said.

The conference of investigators at the Lindbergh home followed by a few hours a statement authorized by Colonel Lindbergh to the effect that "no private detective agencies" had been enlisted in the hunt for his baby.

The statement reaffirmed the Lindberghs' earlier announcing that their sole object was to obtain the safe return of Charles Augustus Jr., 20-month-old youngster stolen from his crib eighteen days ago.

Colonel Schwartzkopf refused to answer questions concerning the conference. It continued several hours. All visitors were barred from the estate while it continued.

POCATELLO, Ida., March 18.—Ignace Blaistein, 30, arrested on a burglary charge, was held today while authorities investigated a story that he drove the automobile in which Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. was kidnapped.

Blaistein was arrested in Boise Wednesday, and brought here, charged with stealing clothing from a fraternity house.

Police sergeant Robert Pugmire said Blaistein, during questioning, admitted participating in the kidnaping.

The sergeant said Blaistein told him the baby was hidden in Newark, N. J., and named the exact place where the child could be found.

Mayor T. C. Coffin, of Pocatello, questioned Blaistein, and then ordered all details of his statement forwarded to the New Jersey police.

Blaistein, a dark complexioned, short man with a large nose, was arrested in Boise when he attempted to pawn clothing stolen in the fraternity house here.

He said he arrived here last Friday in an automobile with two other men involved in the Lindbergh plot.

IDENTITY BANDIT
NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Mar. 18.—Charles Lamberson, 32, of Columbus, today was identified as one of two men who robbed the Bolivar state bank of Bolivar, O., of $2,000 police said. The cashier and a deputy marshal made the asserted identification.

FEAR MISSING OHIO WOMAN WAS SLAIN; COMPANION WOUNDED

RAVENNA, O., March 18.—The whereabouts of Mrs. Mary Hair, 43, a widow of Wadsworth, O., remained a mystery today, while her sweetheart, Ivan Hackenberg, 24, lay near death in Robinson Memorial Hospital here with two bullet wounds in the chest.

Sheriff Le Roy Jones admitted increasing anxiety for Mrs. Hair, missing since Wednesday night, and expressed fears she may have been slain.

Hackenberg continued to insist at the hospital that his wounds were self-inflicted and that he did not know what happened to Mrs. Hair. He said he shot himself after a quarrel with her and that she then "ran away."

Authorities found a 32-caliber revolver in a barn near Palmyra. There were four discharged cartridges in the chamber. Hackenberg had been shot twice. Mrs. Hair's husband died last June. She had been a divorcee prior to that marriage. Her brother, Harold McCork, with whom she lived in Wadsworth, expressed grave fears for her today.

MEASURE TO AID DEPOSITORS OF CLOSED BANKS CAUSES DISPUTE

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Legislation for relief of depositors of closed banks today is involved in an angry dispute which must delay and might defeat the measure.

The relief project to create a $700,000,000 fund for quick liquidation of a closed bank's assets figures in the dispute only because it is part of the general Glass bank bill.

Administration senators and Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, brought the bill to the senate yesterday in apparent amity. Within a few hours they had fallen out and were battling in press statements regarding the nature of their agreement.

The United Press was informed on unquestioned authority that the administration will fight certain provisions of the Glass bill on the grounds that they would provide permanent deflationary amendment of the federal reserve act.

The issue now is in deadlock. Senators Townsend, Rep., Del. and Walcott, Rep., Conn., who served for weeks with Glass on the subcommittee which prepared the final draft of the bill announced that it was introduced that "a few sections can be improved materially."

"It is of the utmost importance," their joint statement continued, "at this time that no permanent changes in the banking law of the federal reserve system be made which might be construed as deflationary."

Glass was angered by the attitude of his colleagues and announced their statement was "altogether contrary to my understanding." He said it had been agreed by the subcommittee that none of its members would attempt to change any provision of the bill relating to the "use of federal reserve facilities, for stock speculative purposes."

Banking opposition to the bill centers around these restrictive provisions and, it is understood, there have been complaints against the series of penalties and fines proposed for violation of the regulations. Glass explained that the original federal reserve act contained prohibitions against extension of credit for other than commercial, industrial or agricultural purposes but that for lack of penalties it had not been enforced in some instances.

CANDIDATES AMONG NOTABLES AT FISH- GAME BANQUET HERE

Oratory Vies With Musical Treat At Annual Affair

"The primary thing is to create better co-operation between farmers, hunters and fishermen and the government"—David S. Ingalls, assistant secretary of the navy in charge of aeronautics.

"We should become 'conservation conscious,'" ex-Governor Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati.

"Ohio need not take a back seat to any other state in the matter of conservation"—Charles V. Truax, former state secretary of agriculture under Governor V. Donahey's administration.

"We are still searching for an adequate remedy in conservation, but we must have a long-time program"—Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown.

These were the dominating thoughts expressed by four prominent speakers at the subject of conservation of fish and game and natural resources at the annual banquet of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association at Masonic Temple Thursday night. More than 325 sportsmen, their families and invited guests, attended.

Governor George White, who had intended to be present, was detained at Columbus by urgent matters demanding his attention, following on the heels of his decision to call the legislature into extraordinary session to enact unemployment relief legislation, and sent his regrets late Thursday afternoon.

Despite the presence of a former governor, two other Republican

HOUSE BEGINS WORK ON BILLION DOLLAR TAX INCREASE BILL

Forgets Hectic Fight On Sales Tax Until Monday

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The house pushed the hectic sales tax fight out into the cloak rooms today and rolled up its sleeves for first actual work on the billion dollar tax increase bill.

Natural income taxes, which represent almost a 100 per cent increase for individuals with incomes of less than $5,000, was the first provision brought under consideration.

Acting Chairman Crisp of the ways and means committee announced the bill would be taken up section by section, and the normal rates were in section one. His plan means that the 2 1/4 per cent sales tax will be reached about Monday.

Until then the party leaders working in a coalition and opponents of the tax are planning a series of off-stage maneuvers to strengthen their positions in general debate on the subject ended in a night session which lasted until 10:30 p. m. yesterday. The high point of the closing day was reached when Democratic Floor Leader Rainey delivered a one-hour and forty minute defense of the $595,000,000 sales levy.

HITLER SAYS FORCE IS FOR PROTECTION

BERLIN, March 18.—Concentration of some 500,000 "storm troops" of Adolf Hitler's Fascist organization was for protection against Communists and not aimed at a violent assumption of power, Hitler said today in a statement from his Munich headquarters.

Hitler admitted the concentration while Prussian police examined thousands of documents seized in raids on Nazi headquarters throughout Prussia yesterday. Police claimed they found "significant material concerning civil war preparations by Hitler's brown shirt army."

The search continued until late yesterday and included 170 offices and homes of Fascist leaders. It was understood that police would turn over their evidence to the chief public prosecutor.

Songs

MONTE CARLO, March 18. —Chauncey Olcott, famous ballad singer, who introduced the song "Mother Machree," died early today from pernicious anemia. He was 71 years old.

Olcott's wife, son and daughter were at his bedside at his villa here. The body of the singer-actor will be buried in New York, they said.

Olcott was a native of Buffalo, N. Y., where he was born July 21, 1860. He was developed as a singer by the late R. M. Hooley and became famous as the "Irish tenor."

He married Margaret O'Donovan of San Francisco in 1897, travelled with Hooley's company several years, appeared with various minstrel and opera troupes, and then went to England to sing in comic opera.

Olcott succeeded W. J. Scanlan as star in Irish musical dramas and returned to introduce "Mother Machree," the greatest song hit of his career.

Other Irish songs which Olcott made famous before his serious illness in 1925 included "I Love the Name of Mary," "A Little Bit of Heaven, Sure They Call It Ireland," "My Wild Irish Rose," "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," and many more sentimental ballads of that type.

"A Little Bit of Heaven" which Olcott sang in "Barry of Barrymore," ended with the line that became famous in many parts of the world: "And when they had it finished, sure they called it Ireland."

Olcott always had to sing "My Wild Irish Rose" no matter in what play he appeared.

"My wild Irish rose, the sweetest flower that grows
You may search everywhere but none can compare
With my wild Irish rose.
My wild Irish rose, the sweetest flower that grows
And some day for my sake she may let me take
The bloom from my wild Irish rose."

In "The Heart of Paddy Whack," Olcott introduced "When Irish Eyes are Smiling:

"When Irish eyes are smiling
Sure it's like a morn in spring
In the lit of Irish laughter you can hear the angels sing
When Irish hearts are happy all the world seems bright and gay
And when Irish eyes are smiling, sure they steal your heart away."

"Mother Machree" was the most famous of Olcott's songs, and he introduced it in "Rugged Robin":

"Sure I love the dear silver that shines in your hair
And the brown that's all furrowed and wrinkled with care
I kiss the dear fingers all toll-worn for me
May God bless you and keep you, mother machree."

KIDNAPING SEARCH BECOMES ROUTINE; SEARCHERS CONFER

Little Hope Placed On Recent Clues; Suspect Held

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 18.—State police announced today they have located two German servants who disappeared from the home of Leandro Lightfoot at Franklin Park immediately after the kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. The couple whose names were listed as Mr. and Mrs. Engstengberg, were being questioned today.

It was not revealed where they had been located.

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 18.—Routine investigation of hundreds of reports, including two from the far west, continued today after Colonel Lindbergh's secret night conference with leaders in the hunt for his kidnapped baby.

One report was from Pocatello, Idaho, to the effect that a suspect in another case there had said he drove the kidnaper's car. The report was considered by some to be a flippant boast.

The second far west report was based on a question asked Colonel H. Norman Schwartzkopf, and involved a further check of activities of Denver gangsters.

Practically all other "leads" were considered useless; even the investigation of two German servants who left their jobs near Franklin Park the day after the kidnapping was believed to be a more or less perfunctory checkup.

Reports of clues in the Bronx, and in West Point, Conn., were unfounded, a police statement said.

The conference of investigators at the Lindbergh home followed by a few hours a statement authorized by Colonel Lindbergh to the effect that "no private detective agencies" had been enlisted in the hunt for his baby.

Colonel Schwartzkopf refused to answer questions concerning the conference. It continued several hours. All visitors were barred from the estate while it continued.

POCATELLO, Ida., March 18.—Ignace Blaistein, 30, arrested on a burglary charge, was held today while authorities investigated his story that he drove the automobile in which Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. was kidnapped.

Blaistein was arrested in Boise Wednesday, and brought here, charged with stealing clothing from a fraternity house.

Police sergeant Robert Pagnire said Blaistein, during questioning, admitted participating in the kidnapping.

The sergeant said Blaistein told him the baby was hidden in Newark, N. J., and named the exact place where the child could be found.

Mayor T. C. Coffin, of Pocatello, questioned Blaistein, and then ordered all details of his statement forwarded to the New Jersey police.

Blaistein, a dark complexioned, short man with a large nose, was arrested in Boise when he attempted to pawn clothing stolen in the fraternity house here.

He said he arrived here last Friday in an automobile with two other men involved in the Lindbergh plot.

MEASURE TO AID DEPOSITORS OF CLOSED BANKS CAUSES DISPUTE

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Legislation for relief of depositors of closed banks today is involved in an angry dispute which must delay and might defeat the measure.

The relief project to create a $700,000,000 fund for quick liquidation of a closed bank's assets figures in the dispute only because it is part of the general Glass banking bill.

Administration senators and Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, brought the bill to the senate yesterday in apparent haste. Within a few hours they had fallen out and were battling in press statements regarding the nature of their agreement.

The United Press was informed on unquestioned authority that the administration will fight certain provisions of the Glass bill on the grounds that they would provide permanent deflationary amendment of the federal reserve act.

The issue now is in deadlock. Senators Townsend, Rep. Del. and Walcott, Rep. Conn., who served for weeks with Glass on the subcommittee which prepared the final draft of the bill announced after it was introduced that "a few sections can be improved materially."

It is of the utmost importance," their joint statement continued, "at this time that no permanent changes in the banking law of the federal reserve system be made which might be construed as deflationary."

Authorities found a 32-caliber revolver in a barn near Palmyra, Pa. There were four discharged cartridges in the chamber. Hackenberg had been shot twice. Mrs. Hair's husband died last June. She had been a divorcee prior to that marriage. Her brother, Harold McKork, with whom she lived in Wadsworth, expressed grave fears for her today.

"Hackenberg was in love with her," he related. "He had asked her to marry but he refused because of the difference in their ages. She told me once she was afraid of him."

CANDIDATES AMONG NOTABLES AT FISH- GAME BANQUET HERE

Oratory Vies With Musical Treat At Annual Affair

"The primary thing is to create better co-operation between farmers, hunters and fishermen and the government"—David S. Ingalls, assistant secretary of the navy in charge of aeronautics.

"We should become 'conservation conscious,'" —ex-Governor Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati.

"Ohio need not take a back seat to any other state in the matter of conservation" —Charles V. Truax, former state secretary of agriculture under Governor Vic Donahey's administration.

"We are still searching for an adequate remedy in conservation, but we must have a long-time program"—Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown.

These were the dominating thoughts expressed by four prominent speakers on the subject of conservation of fish and game and natural resources at the annual banquet of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association at Masonic Temple Thursday night. More than 325 sportsmen, their families and invited guests, attended.

Governor George White, who had intended to be present, was detained at Columbus by urgent matters demanding his attention, following on the heels of his decision to call the legislature into extraordinary session to enact unemployment relief legislation, and sent his regrets late Thursday afternoon.

Despite the presence of a former governor, two other Republican

HOUSE BEGINS WORK ON BILLION DOLLAR TAX INCREASE BILL

Forgets Hectic Fight On Sales Tax Until Monday

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The house pushed the hectic sales tax fight out into the cloak rooms today and rolled up its sleeves for first actual work on the billion dollar tax increase bill.

Normal income rates, which represent almost a 100 per cent increase for individuals with incomes of less than $5,000, was the first provision brought under consideration.

Acting Chairman Crisp of the ways and means committee announced the bill would be taken up section by section, and the normal rates were in section one. His plan means that the 24 per cent sales tax will be reached about Monday.

Until then the party leaders working in a coalition and opponents of the tax are planning a series of off-stage maneuvers to strengthen their positions. General debate on the subject ended in a night session which lasted until 10:30 p. m. yesterday. The high point of the closing day was reached.

Democratic Floor Leader Bailey delivered a one-hour and forty minute defense of the $555,000,000 sales levy.

HITLER SAYS FORCE IS FOR PROTECTION

BERLIN, March 18.—Concentration of some 500,000 "storm troops" of Adolf Hitler's Fascist organization was for protection against Communists and not aimed at a violent assumption of power, Hitler said today in a statement from his Munich headquarters.

Hitler admitted the concentration while Prussian police examined thousands of documents seized in raids on Nazi headquarters throughout Prussia yesterday. Police claimed they found "significant material concerning civil war preparations by Hitler's brown shirt army."

The search continued until late yesterday and included 170 offices and homes of Fascist leaders. It was understood that police would turn over their evidence to the chief public prosecutor.

Professor Speaks To B. P. W. Club Here

"In spite of all the freedom we enjoy today there is a tradition in taste that goes back through all the ages," declared Dr. J. Philip Snyder, head of the English department of Wittenberg College, Springfield, when he spoke on "A Tradition of Taste" at the March meeting of the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club at the Iron Lantern, Green St., Thursday evening.

Dr. Snyder explained that taste is the power to appreciate, to regard and to understand styles of the periods and declared, "There is no possibility of ever going back to styles of bygone periods." In his address he discussed styles in art, literature, architecture, fashions, drama, music and food of various periods, and explained that style is formed by simple imitation, developing of mannerisms and by destiny. "Although the creative and critical instincts in taste are the same today as they have been through the ages there is less restraint now and instead the feeling of 'let yourself go'."

Following his talk an informal discussion, led by Dr. Snyder, was enjoyed.

Forty-five members and guests of the club enjoyed dinner at 6 o'clock. Tables were attractively decorated with bowls of green sweet peas and tall green tapers in crystal candlesticks. During the dinner hour, Patricia Ann and Larry Farrell, entertained the guests by singing an Irish song, "Barney McCoy." Miss Virginia Fletcher, president, presided at a short business meeting.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. J. Walker Gibney, chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson, Mrs. Alice R. Ruthrauff, the Misses Edna Jack, Alice Brownell and Bertha Warner.

HIS HEALTH IMPROVED 40%

After Use of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

If you are constipated, read this letter which Mr. Murray had attested by Notary Public:

"Two months ago I commenced using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to relieve constipation. I am in better health today than I have been in years, due to the use of your wonderful bran. My bowels move regularly, and my general health has improved 40%."—George A. Murray, 288 K Street, South Boston, Mass.

Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN brings two things needed to correct common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.

How much better to use ALL-BRAN than to abuse your system with pills and drugs—often harmful.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation—in serious cases, with every meal. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Use as a cereal with milk or cream, or in cooking. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

MANY APPLICANTS FOR SPRING HOUSE CLEANING LISTED

With spring starting Sunday and house-cleaning time beginning soon afterward Xenians wishing assistance in housework will benefit from the Free Employment Bureau at 18 E. Market St.

Elderly women seeking housework for room and board, and in some cases no salary, and women wanting places as companions are on Mrs. Wirthlin's lists. Men seeking yard work, particularly seasonal now, are available also.

Mrs. Wirthlin is also anxious to place a number of boys who have applied. These youths, about 18 years of age, are available for general labor of any kind and are recommended by the bureau. Mrs. Wirthlin urges Xenians who need labor of any nature to call the bureau. The phone number is 336.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee.—Isaiah, xxvi, 3.

BRAINS AND BEAUTY

A well-known artist was recently asked to act as judge at one of those beauty contests which seem to have become featured events in many American colleges. He agreed to serve, but not before he had delivered himself of some ungalant remarks to the effect that he had never seen any really pretty girls in any of the colleges he had visited.

On the heels of this bombast comes the report of a woman educator concerning the physical attractions of gifted children. The result of surveys on the subject is the conclusion that gifted children are taller, heavier and stronger than others, and are as a rule superior in character. The adolescents also exceed those of only average intelligence in beauty of face.

One must always remember that the question of what constitutes beauty is debatable. Perfect regularity of feature and ideal proportion of figure are rare, and usually confined to the professional beauties of the stage and of the art world. Yet every one has seen beauty in some friend or acquaintance whose lineaments do not conform to those of a Greek god or the Venus of Milo, which are perfection for the Caucasian race and not at all beautiful to men and women of other races.

Humankind, the world around, recognizes and bows before a beauty more compelling than that of form. Charm, animation, graciousness, and all the lovely virtues must come from within the souls of those who possess them. "Handsome is as handsome does" is more than a copy-book sentence. Even perfect features have no power to sustain admiration if spirit is lacking; just as the wrinkled faces of the very old often are illumined by a serene beauty born of suffering, experience and wisdom.

There is no reason why beauty and brains should not be found in the same individual. Beauty is often the handmaid of intelligence, and again we are not unacquainted with lovely women who deliberately dissemble in a subtle use of their intelligence for their own ends.

PAPER MONEY

There is said to be enough of the old, large-sized paper money in existence to wipe out about half of America's national deficit. United States Treasury reports set the amount as $575,000,000. Nearly three years ago all the old-style bills were called in, and yet today more than half a billion dollars' worth still are outside those channels which would sweep them into the Treasury's waste paper baskets and its macerators.

None of these $75,000,000 dollars can be performing a constructive mission. Were any of them to drift into the channels of trade, they would speedily find their way into the banks, by which they would be sentenced to the Federal Repository for Homeless Dollars. In exchange, slimmer, more youthful bills would emerge, ready to speed up the currents of commerce. A very few of the old-style bills may be wandering around in a circle, but in all probability the great majority have gone into temporary retirement and need to be teased to come out and enjoy the beautiful spring sunshine. Undoubtedly many found their way into private collections and others were destroyed in fires, but the average paper note of even the denomination of $1 is generally on a leash if it is ever allowed far away from home.

It is a foregone conclusion that there are persons who are acquainted with the whereabouts of these antiques and thereby in a position to start a movement for a National Reunion of the Grizzled Greenbacks at the United States Treasury building in Washington. Such a reunion would hurry the oncoming return of prosperity.

HEALTH NOT AFFECTED

In a statement based on recent reports, the officers of a nationally known insurance company said that "depression and unemployment have not yet affected the public health." On the contrary, the year just ended has been a remarkably healthy one, perhaps the healthiest on record, with tuberculosis, diphtheria, whooping cough, pneumonia, intestinal complaints and accidents in childbirth accounting for fewer fatalities than ever before. The general decrease stands, also, in the face of new high death rates reported for cancer, diseases of the heart, diabetes and automobile accidents, highway fatalities reaching a total of about 34,000.

However, in reporting figures, the insurance company spokesmen hasten to say that there is no justification for the thesis that hard times and good health go hand in hand. They decline to accept the theory that there is a hidden physical blessing in deprivation and anxiety; and the idea that an enforced "simple life" means better health, certainly may be carried too far. But at least it is made evident by the reports submitted, that many things we have grown to consider requisite to life are things with which we can dispense successfully, as far as physical well-being is concerned. On the other hand, the causes of fatality that show increase are, in a general way, causes born of sophisticated self-indulgence or fast living, of which there still is plenty in our country.

BOYCOTT THREAT

A radical independence organization in Manila has cabled Mr. Hoover that unless there is "prompt fulfillment of the promise of independence embodied in the Jones law," a boycott will be instituted against "American imperialist products."

What "American imperialist products" are, we confess, we do not know. We do know, however, that there is no promise of immediate independence for the Philippines in the Jones Act of 1916, although a desperate effort was made by Senator Clarke, an Arkansas Democrat, supported by Woodrow Wilson, to set a definite and early date for cutting the leading strings that hold the Philippines to this country. Wise Filipino leaders are content to wait yet a little while before starting to paddle their own canoe in troubled economic and political waters.

The threat of an anti-American boycott by even and irresponsible element in the Philippines ought to be a lesson to certain factions in this country, which are, with equal irresponsibility, agitating for a boycott of Japanese trade. The boycott idea is not one to be encouraged by intelligent people. Among other disadvantages of its practical application is the facility with which it can be turned against those who espouse it and the difficulty they find in consistently objecting to being boycotted, who advocate boycotting others.

Incidentally, Pearl White's nickname for Manhattan is "Dearie." . . . Why? . . . Ask her. There aren't many children of the spotlight who feel that kindly about the town after knowing it as long and as well as Pearl knows it. . . .

To my mere male amazement, I spied a corsage of orchids planted on the back of a lady's low cut evening gown the other night. . . . ABOUT NUTS

The thousands of cracked-brained missives received in the Lindbergh baby case have given sociologists and psychiatrists grounds for alarm about the state of the national sanity. Are there really that many cranks and nuts loose in the land? A professor of mental diseases in a local hospital discussed the matter today with me and dropped an optimistic counter-theory.

This savant's opinion is that the desire to write anonymous and silly letters frequently overwhelms folks as sane as you or I (well, as sane as you are, anyway). Brief thought recalls corroborating incidences. For example, a schoolmate of mine who led his class in differential calculus, once confessed to an irrefragable yet for writing anonymous notes full of groundless tips to the prohibition authorities.

One curious angle in connection with the Lindbergh mail is that after the "ransom note" (of whose existence I am extremely skeptical, as previously reported) began to be printed in the newspapers, the papers began mis-spelling Lindy's name as it was mis-spelled in the alleged note: "Lindberg." One staid afternoon gazette spelled the name that way through an entire lead story.

Headquarters of local constabularies in the big cities of the world come to be known, invariably, by various catch-phrases which appeal to the popular imagination. This is no less true of New York than of other metropolises.

There's Scotland Yard, of course, for London; and "Rue Jerusalem" has an analogous meaning for Frenchmen who have in mind their Surete.

CRADLE OF THE DEEP!

LABOR-SAVING MACHINERY NO LONGER HELD TO BLAME FOR MEN LOSING JOBS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—The theory that the "mechanization of industry" is largely responsible for unemployment seems to me to be losing credit.

It was a highly-respected theory when Congress met last December. Today many of the foremost economists in Congress pooh-pooh it. A few of them did, from the outset. Of late they appear to be making numerous converts.

LABOR LEADERS have agreed, for at least a couple of generations, that the workers made a mistake when they fought the introduction of power-driven machinery early in the nineteenth century.

It did, indeed, reduce employment—but only momentarily.

Increased, cheapened production cut prices, making available to the masses countless conveniences which they never had been able to buy before. With this enlarged demand, more workers than ever were needed. Industry flourished unprecedently. Labor profited accordingly.

It's an old story now. Economists are perfectly familiar with it.

However, the theorists by whom it is assumed that industry's twentieth-century mechanization is the principal cause of present unemployment, contend that this time the acceleration of output really has surpassed the possibilities of increased consumption to absorb it.

Two remedies have been suggested:

1. Shortened working hours.

2. Vast programs of public improvement ("make work," as the socialists call it) to take care of the idle.

The trouble with plan No. 1, is it immediately raises the question: "Can hours be shortened without correspondingly lowered pay?" Labor answers "Yes," but it already is evident that it cannot be done.

He said, was the way women walk up the aisle of a theater and turn, when they reach the exit and look back to see how many people have been looking at them. . . . Do women do that?

One of the pleasantest passages in all literature is Robert Louis Stevenson's description of a night under the stars. It's in his "Travels With a Donkey" and it begins:

"Night is a dead monotonous period under a roof, but in the open it passes lightly, with its stars and its dew and its perfumes."

In the morning, after that fair adventure, Stevenson scattered small coins along the trail in gratitude for his memorable lodging. Reminding us that the great majority of us try, as best we can, to pay for the pleasure we get from life.

I saw a young woman who looked just right. She wore a smile, a little green hat, a light brown fur coat, a green dress of the color of the hat.

She walked with a spring, you knew she was happy, and the color scheme of her outfit reminded me of the tall green-and-tan thistles you sometimes see in vacant lots down by the railroad track.

She looked just right and she knew she did. That must be happiness.

without a prolonged struggle, any way.

Moreover, the late Joseph S. McCoy, the treasury's famous actuary, long recognized as one of the keenest economists in the world, in a talk I had with him shortly before his death a few months ago, predicted another difficulty.

"The early nineteenth century factory day of as much as 14 to 16 hours," he said, "was inhuman, and the 10-hour day was burdensome. The reduction to 8 hours was natural. The average man is unwilling to work much longer than that even for over-time pay, but I doubt that he yearns for appreciably more leisure than he enjoys or an 8-hour working day basis. If not, and his standard day is shortened, he simply will look for supplementary employment, because he will have a residue of energy and will want to capitalize it."

Plan No. 2, as an emergency measure, to break a not-very-clearly-understood deadlock, is one thing, but as a permanent remedy it is a social readjustment that it is hard to tell what it might and might not lead to.

That is to say, it would mean the putting of seven or eight million workers regularly on the government's payroll—a third of the country's population, counting dependents.

And it is as a permanency that this system is insisted on by those who contend that unemployment has reached its present proportions mainly as a result of industry's mechanization. If their premise is correct, it would appear that they may be right as to their conclusion.

But is their premise correct? I put this question to Representative George Huddleston of Alabama, who certainly is as good a friend of the workman as there is in Congress, is so recognized by labor, and, incidentally, is the sponsor of a huge road-building program pending now at the capital.

"Labor-saving devices," he answered, "are as old as the first clog thrown by a cave man to bring down a coconut, instead of having to climb the tree for it. Were his fellow cave men thrown out of work and left to starve because of his discovery? Of course not. They imitated him and all had more coconuts. To be sure, if he had been able to patent his process and create a monopoly, it probably would have been different."

In the upper house of congress, Senator Marvel M. Logan of Kentucky is much the same type of original thinker as Representative Huddleston in the lower branch.

"Folk forge," says the Kentuckian, "that labor-saving machinery takes labor to make it, and if the man who does make it also uses a labor-saving machine to do it, someone likewise had to make that machine. Sooner or later the sequence leads back to a hand-worked genesis. Increased human efficiency may cut out some labor; machinery very little, if any."

Thus the theory that the "mechanization of industry" is our great problem of today is gradually losing ground in Washington.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

FINANCING THE CHILDREN By MRS. MARY MORTON

Soon after the baby comes, if not before, the fond parents should begin to plan for his education, which usually includes college. This is the time to plan the financing of the college education.

Some young people do put themselves through college. It can be done. But usually this entails too great a strain and too much work and responsibility—all work and no play" making Jack an over-worked boy.

Why not create a college fund? At the least computation it will require $500 a year to see your son through—$2,000 for the four years. Each month a deposit of $6.25 in the savings bank, where it will draw 4 per cent interest, compounded semi-annually, will do the trick. At this rate of interest the sum put by will amount to $1,986.02 by the time he is 18—starting at six weeks of age—of which $634.02 will be interest money.

Or it can be carried along until the child's fifteenth year, when it will amount to $1,549.30. Then it can be shown to the student-to-be, with the understanding that he will earn the other $450.70 within the next three years.

Or the money may accumulate until it reaches a certain sum and then withdrawn from the savings account and invested where it will earn more interest.

Another plan to accomplish this same result is for one parent or the other to take out a life insurance policy of the deferred payment type to mature in 15 years.

It is true that $500 a year will not meet all the expenses of a college education, but such sum, supplemented by possibly a little help from the parents and the student's own earnings, will carry him through without too great financial pressure.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Short Cut

A short cut for making pies may be made by the following method: Mix enough pastry for six pies. Roll out and fit into the pie tins for pastry shells. Wrap securely in waxed paper or aluminum foil and store in the refrigerator until wanted. Then bake as usual. This is a better method than storing the pastry and rolling as needed.

Letters Ask For Facts

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

By all odds the largest number of letters received by this department during the last two months have been about the treatment of varicose veins and the new treatment for baldness.

No new developments have occurred in the treatment of baldness since the first announcement. When further reports are made they will be recorded in this column.

While no new developments have occurred in the modern treatment of varicose veins, either, the results have been so encouraging that the method will be described again in the hope that some chronic invalids, who have not heard that such a valuable method of treatment exists, will be benefited.

The long continued existence of varicose veins imposes a heavy burden on the skin of the legs. The veins which have lost their valves and have hardened walls hold a column of blood in them which remains almost stationary instead of progressing towards the heart with a load of waste products. In the course of time the skin becomes reddened and eczematous and then ulcers form, which refuse to heal, and remain many years.

The only treatment for these conditions up to a few years ago was surgical removal of the veins.

It was not always successful. The injection treatment consists of the injection of a solution in the veins which causes an obliteration of the veins. The injected vein turns into a cord of scar tissue. The blood from the leg then returns to the heart exclusively through the remaining healthy veins and the burden on the skin of stagnant blood is removed. In most cases the ulcers heal.

The treatment is carried out in a series of injections which cause a little discomfort. Patients can take the treatment during the noon hour and return to their work during the day.

Some of the results have been very remarkable. Leg ulcers which have lasted for twenty years, which have required almost the constant attention of the victim, being dressed several times a day, have healed up in a few weeks.

In a few cases the clot formed in the vein has caused some pain and a cord or knot has formed up the entire leg. But on the application of heat and the use of rest, these go away and do no harm. Physicians all over the country have become familiar with this method of treatment and either do it themselves or know of a practitioner in the community who does so. For the benefit of those whose physicians are not acquainted with the details of the method, the following references are given: a book called "Varicose Veins," by Dr. McPheters, F. A. Davis company, 1931; articles in "Surgery, Gynaecology and Obstetrics," Vol. 45, 1927 and Vol. 51, 1930; and in "International Surgical Digest," Vol. 11, 1931.

Should Wife Support Mate

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a mother of eight children and am 45 and my husband is 43. He seeks the company of other women."

"What would you do if you were in my position, as I provide for the living, keeping my children and he still stays at home expecting me to keep him? He hasn't worked for two years."

"Yet he says he still loves us all. Please give me your advice."

"Anxious Mother."

If your husband was true to you and tried to help, even if he could find little work outside the home, I would say keep him until times improve a bit. He should do the housework, with the children's help, taking your place in the home while you take his at earning the living. I know sometimes it is easier for women to find work than men.

But as he hasn't the decency to be true to you, I can't see why you should keep him. Of course he says he still loves you all. That is his cheap way of keeping his home and free board and lodging. If he really cared he would at least make an earnest effort to earn his share of the living and not just talk.

Any woman who is courageous enough to undertake the support of eight children certainly should not also be burdened with a man. He is a bad example to your growing children and an imposition on you. Even if you overlook his philandering you should insist that he do his share of the work or get out.

Virginia Lee

What should a girl do if young men do not take her seriously? Boys take me places and we do things, but they all have their own crushes.

"I am 21 and I think it is about time that I was taken seriously. How could I be thought as serious and not just laugh at and with for my jokes?"

A short time ago a boy wrote that he had proposed marriage to his girl friend and he couldn't get her to take him seriously, and his feelings were very much hurt in consequence. Now you can't get the boys to take you seriously.

I think it quite probable that you laugh and joke all the time, dear, and the boys think you are just that kind of a girl. Why not be serious once in awhile when what's the matter. Marilyn, you are so quiet?" Then you can tell them that you are feeling serious, as you often do, and maybe they will take you so.

Brown Eyes: There is no harm at all in a little girl of 13 talking to the boys who are her school-mates or being serious with them. I also think the wise mother lets her daughter of this age bring both girl and boy friends to her home.

Women Paint Too Much

By GLADYS GLAD

A famous Italian portrait painter recently declared that most American women look monotonously middle-class because they use rouge and lipstick. His suggestion is that women discard these cosmetics entirely, and permit themselves to appear pale and interesting like Mona Lisa.

The only trouble with this suggestion, as I see it, is that many females would probably appear pale and interesting like Mona Lisa.

There is, however, one use of rouge that I think the average woman could dispense with without any great loss to herself. What I refer to is the use of rouge on the eyelids. For although I have seen this done so that it gave a very pleasing effect, it requires far too much skill for common usage. The rouge must be put on so delicately that the casual observer cannot detect its artificiality at all.

The exact effect of this trick in rouging is to give a soft glow and animated expression to the face. But if such make-up is over-done even the least bit, it loses all its effectiveness, and makes one appear anything but attractive. In my honest opinion, the skill of the average girl or woman is not sufficient for her to undertake such a departure in make-up.

There's another reason why I'm not so keen about rouging the eyelids, too. The skin of the lids is very sensitive and wrinkles easily. If, then, you rub dry rouge on it (and dry rouge is usually advised for this type of make-up) the rouge may dry the skin and cause the lids to become wrinkled and old-looking. If you wish to make up your eyes so that they appear large, bright and attractive, stick to the use of a good eyeshadow cream and forget that rouge was ever employed by anyone for this purpose.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Corn Meal R. P. B.: The corn meal may be used on a lathered washcloth to cleanse the skin, or may be made into a paste with milk and used as a face mask.

Reducing Mrs. K.: You can indeed reduce your bust and stomach, even if you have had children. The bust and stomach reducing instructions are contained in detail in my booklet on "The New Figure." Measurements Markie: To harmonize with your waist and hip measurements, your bust should measure 33 inches. A finger massage can be submitted for the nightly hair brushing, if the brushing seems to soften your wave too much.

Editor's Note: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling. For her articles on "Care of the Hands and Nails" and "Care of the Feet and Legs," two cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope are required. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee.—Isaiah, xxvi, 3.

BRAINS AND BEAUTY

A well-known artist was recently asked to act as judge at one of those beauty contests which seem to have become featured events in many American colleges. He agreed to serve, but not before he had delivered himself of some ungallant remarks to the effect that he had never seen any really pretty girls in any of the colleges he had visited.

On the heels of this bombast comes the report of a woman educator concerning the physical attractions of gifted children. The result of surveys on the subject is the conclusion that gifted children are taller, heavier and stronger than others, and are as a rule superior in character. The adolescents also exceed those of only average intelligence in beauty of face.

One must always remember that the question of what constitutes beauty is debatable. Perfect regularity of feature and ideal proportion of figure are rare, and usually confined to the professional beauties of the stage and of the art world. Yet every one has seen beauty in some friend or acquaintance whose lineaments do not conform to those of a Greek god or the Venus of Milo, which are perfection for the Caucasian race and not at all beautiful to men and women of other races.

Humankind, the world around, recognizes and bows before a beauty more compelling than that of form. Charm, animation, graciousness, and all the lovely virtues must come from within the souls of those who possess them. "Handsome is as handsome does" is more than a copy-book sentence. Even perfect features have no power to sustain admiration if spirit is lacking; just as the wrinkled faces of the very old often are illumined by a serene beauty born of suffering, experience and wisdom.

Headquarters of local constabularies in the big cities of the world come to be known, invariably, by various catch-phrases which appeal to the popular imagination. This is no less true of New York than of other metropolises. There's Scotland Yard, of course, for London; and "Rue Jerusalem" has an analogous meaning for Frenchmen who have in mind their Surete.

LABOR-SAVING MACHINERY NO LONGER HELD TO BLAME FOR MEN LOSING JOBS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—The theory that the "mechanization of industry" is largely responsible for unemployment seems to me to be losing credit.

It was a highly-respected theory when Congress met last December. Today many of the foremost economists in Congress pooh-pooh it. A few of them did, from the outset. Of late they appear to be making numerous converts.

Labor leaders have agreed, for at least a couple of generations, that the workers made a mistake when they fought the introduction of power-driven machinery early in the nineteenth century.

It did, indeed, reduce employment—but only momentarily. Increased, cheapened production cut prices, making available to the masses countless conveniences which they never had been able to buy before. With this enlarged demand, more workers than ever were needed. Industry flourished unprecedently. Labor profited accordingly.

It's an old story now. Economists are perfectly familiar with it. However, the theorists by whom it is assumed that industry's twentieth century mechanization is the principal cause of present unemployment, contend that this time the acceleration of output really has surpassed the possibilities of increased consumption to absorb it.

Two remedies have been suggested:

1. Shortened working hours.
2. Vast programs of public improvement ("make work," as the socialists call it) to take care of the idle.

The trouble with plan No. 1 is, it immediately raises the question: "Can hours be shortened without correspondingly lowered pay?" Labor answers "Yes," but it already is evident that it cannot be done.

ALL of US

"If I Had a Million—"

A Man Feels Silly

She Looked Just Right

I heard a man say, "If I had a million dollars—"

The stars stood still, the bright rays of the moon froze in their progress to the earth, an owl ceased to hoot in the cold night air, a baby stopped crying, a policeman blew his whistle, and the world waited to hear what this one man would do if he had a million dollars.

Hardly anything is more interesting than that.

One I read an article by a man on Things About Women That He Didn't Like.... Men are funny.

The thing that irritated him most,

he said, was the way women walk up the aisle of a theater and turn, when they reach the exit and look back to see how many people have been looking at them.... Do women do that?

One of the pleasantest passages in all literature is Robert Louis Stevenson's description of a night under the stars. It's in his "Travels With a Donkey" and it begins:

"Night is a dead monotonous period under a roof, but in the open it passes lightly, with its stars and its dew and its perfumes."

In the morning, after that fair adventure, Stevenson scattered small coins along the trail in gratitude for his memorable lodging. Reminding us that the great majority of us try, as best we can, to pay for the pleasure we get from life.

I saw a young woman who Looked Just Right. She wore a smile, a little green hat, a light brown fur coat, a green dress of the color of the hat.

She walked with a spring, you knew she was happy, and the color scheme of her outfit reminded me of the tall green-and-tan thistles you sometimes see in vacant lots down by the railroad track.

She Looked Just Right and she knew she did. That must be happiness.

Letters Ask For Facts

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

By all odds the largest number of letters received by the department during the last two months have been about the treatment of varicose veins and the new treatment for baldness.

No new developments have occurred in the treatment of varicose veins, either, the results have been so encouraging again in the hope that some chronic invalids, who have not heard that such a valuable method of treatment exists, will be benefited.

The long continued existence of varicose veins imposes a heavy burden on the skin of the legs. The veins which have lost their values and have hardened walls hold a column of blood in them which remains almost stationary instead of progressing towards the heart with a load of waste products. In the course of time the skin becomes reddened and eczematous and then ulcers form, which refuse to heal, and remain many years.

The only treatment for these conditions up to a few years ago was surgical removal of the veins. It was not always successful. The injection treatment consists of the injection of a solution in the veins which causes an obliteration of the veins. The injected vein turns into a cord of scar tissue. The blood from the leg then returns to the heart exclusively through the remaining healthy veins and the burden on the skin of stagnant blood is removed. In most cases the ulcer heals.

The treatment is carried out in a series of injections which cause little discomfort. Patients can take the treatment during the noon hour and return to their work during the day. Some of the results have been very remarkable. Leg ulcers which have lasted for twenty years, which have required almost the constant attention of the victim, being dressed several times a day, have healed up in a few weeks.

In a few cases the clot formed in the vein has caused some pain and a cord or knot has formed up the entire leg. But on the application of heat and the use of rest, these go away and do no harm. Physicians all over the country have become familiar with this method of treatment and either do it themselves or know of a practitioner in the community who does do it. For the benefit of those whose physicians are not acquainted with the details of the method, the following references are given: a book called "Varicose Veins," by Dr. McPherson, P. A. Davis, company, 1931; articles in "Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics," Vol. 45, 1927 and Vol. 51, 1930, and in "International Surgical Digest," Vol. 11, 1931.

Should Wife Support Mate

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a mow-bow but we had a silly quarrel. It was my fault, I apologized. He called me one evening to find his enemy here. He said he wouldn't bother me again."

"If like him too much to give him up, but I am stubborn and so is he. How can I regain his love?"

"Wondering."

"Dear Virginia Lee: What should a girl do if young men do not take her seriously? Boys take me places and we do things, but they all have their own crushes."

"I am 21 and I think it is about time that I was taken seriously. How could I be thought as serious and not just laugh at and with for my jokes?"

"A short time ago a boy wrote that he had proposed marriage to his girl friend and he couldn't get her to take him seriously, and his feelings were very much hurt in consequence. Now you can't get the boys to take you seriously."

I think it quite probable that you laugh and joke all the time, dear, and the boys think you are just that kind of a girl. Why not be serious once in awhile when with them? Then they will say, "What's the matter, Marilyn, you are so quiet?" Then you can tell them that you are feeling serious, as you often do, and maybe they will take you so.

Brown Eyes: There is no harm at all in a little girl of 13 talking to the boys who are her schoolmates or being serious with them. I also think the wise mother lets her daughter of this age bring both girl and boy friends to her home.

A famous Italian portrait painter recently declared that most American women look monotonously middle-class because they use rouge and lipstick. His suggestion is that women discard these cosmetics entirely, and permit themselves to appear pale and interesting like Mona Lisa.

The only trouble with this suggestion, as I see it, is that too many females would appear pale and sickly, rather than pale and interesting. There's no denying that rosy cheeks and red lips make one look healthy. And if for that reason alone, I'm all for our rouges and lipsticks.

Besides, if the country were cluttered up with Mona Lisa-like femmes, even Mona Lisas might become dull and tiresome.

There is, however, one use of rouge that I think the average woman could dispense with without any great loss to herself. What I refer to is the use of rouge on the eyelids. For although I have seen this done so that it gave a very pleasing effect, it requires far too much skill for common usage. The rouge must be put on so delicately that the casual observer cannot detect its artificiality at all.

The exact effect of this trick in making it to give a soft glow and animated expression to the face. But if such make-up is overdone even the least bit, it loses all its effectiveness, and makes one appear anything but attractive. In my honest opinion, the skill of the average girl or woman is not sufficient for her to undertake such a departure in make-up.

There's another reason why I'm not so keen about rouging the eyelids, too. The skin of the lids is very sensitive and wrinkles easily. If, then, you rub dry rouge on it (and dry rouge is usually advised for this type of make-up) the rouge may dry the skin and cause the lids to become wrinkled and old-looking. If you wish to make up your eyes so that they appear large, bright and attractive, stick to the use of a good eyeshadow cream and forget that rouge was ever employed by anyone for this purpose.

FINANCING THE CHILDREN

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Soon after the baby comes, if not before, the fond parents should begin to plan for his education, which usually includes college. This is the time to plan the financing of the college education.

Some young people do put themselves through college. It can be done. But usually this entails too great a strain and too much work and responsibility—all work and no play" making Jack an over-worked boy.

Why not create a college fund? At the least computation it will require $500 a year to see your son through—$2,000 for the four years. Each month a deposit of $62.50 in the savings bank, where it will draw 4 per cent interest compounded semi-annually, will do the trick. At this rate of interest the sum put by will amount to $1,986.02 by the time he is 18—starting at six weeks of age—of which $634.02 will be interest money.

Or it can be carried along until the child's fifteenth year, when he will amount to $1,549.30. Then it can be shown to the student-to-be with the understanding that he will earn the other $450.70 within the next three years.

Or the money may accumulate until it reaches a certain sum and then withdrawn from

SPORT SNAP SHOTS FRAMED by Phil

Sound the tocsin and let there be rejoicing far and wide. Babe Ruth's most famous hold-out—Babe Ruth—has at last been gathered into the New York Yankees fold.

With appropriate pomp and ceremony, the great slugger affixed his John Hancock to the dotted line. In consideration of this he will receive only $75,000 for his services this year. Did we say "only"?

The Babe wanted $80,000. His employers wanted to pay him $70,000. And so, after prolonged dickering and columns and columns of the usual publicity, they split the difference and agreed upon $75,000. One consoling thought is the fact the Babe will pay less income tax.

Ruth, who has been on a championship team more times than any other player in ball history, is in tip-top shape as the result of a long siege of winter conditioning. This great big boy, who was with Boston on three occasions when it won the flag, and played for the pennant-winning Yankee squad three times, says he feels "right." Training camp reports say he looks it too.

Down to 220 pounds, Babe is lighter than he has been at this time in any other year. He says he expects to clout plenty of homers and get his share of base hits this season and if appearances mean anything, the Bambino faces a great year.

The renowned Yankee slugger, by the bye, can eat only two meals a day, whether training or not. Even at that he must work off extra weight in a gymnasium, confronted by a battery of news reel photographers, during the winter season, in order to keep in trim.

Estimates of the probable number of circuit smashes the Babe will smash this year vary, but the fact the ball is less lively may have no effect on him, it didn't last year.

It may be recalled that after the close of the 1930 season, major league club owners decided that home run hitting was becoming too pronounced, and in an effort to restore a more even balance to all phases of the game, it was agreed to eliminate some of the liveliness of the ball.

It is interesting to note that the difference in the ball adopted for 1931 was attested by the reduction in the number of homers. In 1930, players in both big leagues accounted for 1,565 circuit drives—892 in the National and 673 in the American League—whereas during 1931 only 1,068 were made—576 in the American and 492 in the National.

Steve Phillips, genial citizen of this city and nationally known starting judge of harness races, has been re-engaged to get the wrigglers away at the Grand Circuit meeting to be held in conjunction with the Indiana state fair in Indianapolis, Ind. next September.

WILBERFORCE BACK WITH EIGHT SCALPS AFTER VISIT SOUTH

Team Victorious In 19
Out Of 21 Games
This Season

With scalps of eight more victims dangling from its collective belt, the Wilberforce University basketball squad is back from a triumphant trip through the Southland, during which the Green Wave won every game it played.

In the eight road games the Wilberforce cagers scored a grand total of 350 points against 187 for the opposition. Individual scoring honors were captured by Mathews, who tallied seventy-three, followed by Bray with seventy and Singer with sixty-four.

This formidable Wilberforce team has been victorious in nineteen out of twenty-one contests this season, claiming triumphs over some strong independent teams and every college five it has faced. Wilberforce initiated its Southern invasion on Washington's Birthday, celebrating the occasion with a 63 to 39 victory over Kentucky State. On the succeeding two nights Coach Richey's charges registered 38 to 16 and 39 to 22 triumphs over West Kentucky State.

The strong LeMay College basketball team of Memphis, Tenn., were the next to fall prey to the Ohioans, who won twice over this team by margins of 28 to 15 and 48 to 12.

Fresh from their success in Kentucky and Tennessee, the Wilberforce basketballers continued their winning ways at the expense of an all-star team composed of the St. Louis Argus and the Bon Tons, winning 33 to 24. Next the Kansas City Meteors bowed to the "Force" by a score of 42 to 26.

The wind-up of the successful campaign came at Kansas City when the aggressive Wilberforce quintet swamped the Western University court representative, 54 to 33.

HIGH SCHOOL COURT TEAMS IN COLUMBUS FOR STATE TOURNEY

Class Of Basketball
Talent To Decide
Ohio Title

COLUMBUS, O., March 18.—The best high school basketball teams in Ohio were assembled here today to begin their brief but furious campaigns for the state scholastic titles.

Eight class A and eight class B schools were matched in the finals of the state's first elimination contest. First round games were to be played today and tonight, and semi-finals were scheduled for Saturday afternoon and night.

The class A finalists were Pomeroy, Defiance, Akron West, Zanesville, Akron East, Ashland, Columbus North and Dayton Stivers. The class B contenders were Garrettsville, Rossford, Margaretta of Castalia, Dayton Fairmont, Ostrander, North Canton, Stewart and Sugar Creek.

Hundreds of loyal but anxious fans accompanied these teams to the state fairgrounds coliseum to offer spiritual support.

The teams which have been accorded the best chance to win the class A title are Akron West, Columbus North, Zanesville and Dayton Stivers. The class B favorites are Garrettsville, Dayton Fairmont and Ostrander.

They are favored on the strength of their records for the season, an uncertain basis for determining what will happen in such an important tournament. It is not unusual for a surprise team to develop from the lesser ranks.

Pairings for the first round games today follow:

Class A—Defiance vs Pomeroy; Akron West vs Zanesville; Akron East vs Ashland; Columbus North vs Dayton Stivers.

Class B—Garrettsville vs Rossford; Dayton Fairmont vs Castalia; Stewart vs Sugar Creek; Ostrander vs North Canton.

Of the teams in the state tournament, only Dayton Stivers and Zanesville ever have won the state basketball title.

The annual foul shooting contest will be held in connection with the tournament, Saturday night.

REDS CHEERED AS HERMAN COMES EAST

TAMPA, Fla., March 18.—More and more this gigantic trade with the Brooklyn Dodgers is having a cheering effect upon Cincinnati baseball followers.

Babe Herman, the big batsman from California, is on his way to the Reds camp, apparently ready to sign a Cincinnati contract and play baseball. Herman has operated a baseball school and played golf all winter and is expected to be in first class condition.

Wally Gilbert, third baseman, and Ernie Lombardi, catcher, obtained from Brooklyn went through their first workout with the Reds Thursday and appeared ready to play. Manager Dan Howley said he would use them in games with the Yankees and the Athletics on Saturday and Sunday.

A practice game was scheduled for today in preparation for the tilt with the American League leaders over the week-end.

FAILS TO PAY FINE; SENTENCED TO JAIL

Because of his failure to fulfill a promise to pay a fine of $200 and costs assessed last January 12 when he pleaded guilty to possessing liquor, J. M. Liles, Jamestown, was committed to jail Thursday by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith.

Following a raid on his home in which thirty-five quarts of home brew beer and three gallons of wine were confiscated, Liles was freed by Judge Smith on his agreement to pay the fine and costs by March 15. When he defaulted in payment, Judge Smith issued a citation for his arrest and he was sent to jail Thursday.

REPORTS OHIO FISH HAVE WANDERLUST

COLUMBUS, O., March 18.—Ohio fish have the wanderlust, according to Conservation Commissioner William H. Reinhart.

As an experiment to determine the migration habits of the finny tribe, the state conservation department tagged a small mouth black bass, taken from North Bass Lake, Erie, and released it in Stillwater River, Dayton, last November. A Cincinnati fisherman caught the same fish a few weeks ago near Rising Sun, Ind., on the Ohio River. The fish had traveled 113 miles in less than four months.

Bowling

A scheduled Krippendorff League bowling match between the Flex-Welt and Flex-Mode teams Thursday night was postponed by mutual agreement, and may be played off in the form of a double-header during the next round of play. It is also expected that the match between the Arch-O-Pedic and Foot-Resist quintets Friday night may also be cancelled.

BLAIR IN MONEY

VANDALIA, O., March 18.—The 15-year St. Patrick's Day trapshoot here was won by Joe Hiestand, Hillsboro, O., who broke ninety-nine out of 100 targets. H. A. Blair, Spring Valley, O., won class C honors with ninety-five out of 100.

candidates for governor and a former Democratic state director of agriculture, politics, was relegated to the background in the speech-making, and the sportsmen's organization heard the conservation problem analyzed from all angles.

First speaker on the program was Dr. Glenn Adams, Cincinnati, widely known authority on birds and dogs, whose weekly radio broadcasts over station WLW are heard by thousands of listeners.

Dr. Adams, secretary of "More Game Birds in Ohio," a foundation composed of farmers, sportsmen and conservationists interested in having more game birds, including pheasant, Hungarian partridge, grouse, duck and quail, declared he had been broadcasting for five years and derived much enjoyment from his radio talks. He spoke of the desirability of more game bird laws in Ohio.

Referring to the fact that it was during his administration that Ohio's first conservation law was enacted, former Governor Cooper stressed the importance of conservation to the well-being of the state.

He recalled that the first conservation law, providing for a division of conservation, with a bi-partisan board with full authority to appropriate all funds allocated to this division, marked a decided step toward removing conservation from politics and heading the state in the direction of a real program of lasting benefit to the people. Cooper said in part:

"Ohio is rich in natural resources, the accumulated wealth of ages. The time has come when we must preserve and protect these natural heritages. For many years we have been considering the question of conservation in the light of constructive legislation; but somehow there was always the element of suspicion, of misunderstanding and distrust, which made any legislative action impossible. The failure to find common ground for co-operation has been tremendously costly to the state."

"Then too, we have been wanting in a plan of sufficient breadth and comprehensiveness to form a base challenging the attention and interest of the people to a great cause. This has resulted in a waste of natural resources, inherited blessings, without any real regard to the responsibility which we owe to succeeding generations. Forests have been ruthlessly destroyed. Our streams have been polluted, menacing health of our citizens and resulting in great destruction of fish. Little regard has been given to the protection and conservation of wild life. And we have been going along without any definite program for the development of a real park system in Ohio."

Substituting for Governor George White, who could not attend because of the press of legislative problems, former State Director of Agriculture Charles V. Truax, who was largely responsible for establishment of the Xenia fish hatchery, conveyed the governor's regrets and said the chief executive hopes to accomplish all conservation possible in Ohio.

"Just at present, however, Governor White is equally interested in the conservation of human welfare, hence the decision to convene the legislature into extraordinary session to enact relief measures," Truax declared.

The former director reminded the sportsmen's organization that it was during his term of office that the angler's license law was enacted in 1925; that eight large fish hatcheries were built during the next three years and that the Lake Erie headquarters was purchased to distribute consignments of fish and restock streams in all parts of Ohio.

"During my six years of my incumbency we released thousands of pheasants and other game birds and the fruits of our efforts are seen today. Only one other state surpasses Ohio in the number of hunting and fishing licenses annually sold, and only one state exceeds Ohio in the amount of receipts. Ohio need not take a back seat in the matter of conservation."

"I would be derelict in my duty if I failed to point out the importance of conservation of Ohio farms and citizenship, which furnish the grounds on which we hunt and the streams in which we fish."

Discussing economic conditions, the speaker advocated a moratorium for farmers, asserting that "so long as the farmers are bankrupt, so long as they are unable to borrow money to refinance their farms, so long will the country remain in the condition it finds itself today."

The declaration that "we are searching for a remedy in conservation not only in hunting and fishing, but in water as well," was made by Secretary of State Brown.

Conservation, he explained, means something more than mere sport and its attendant thrills; it means recreation, too, and conservation of our worth while natural resources.

Picnicking in years to come an unfailing water supply the year around, the state official said that this will avert the disaster that comes with drought.

"Water and wild game conservation go hand in hand; the two are linked inseparably together," he asserted. "Eventually we will also have more of nature's beauty opened to the public."

"In order to make conservation a living, vibrant thing, we must have a long-time program. It must be free of politics, free of frequent changes of administering officials to bring this about. The farmers and sportsmen of Ohio must be organized and stand together. It will be worth the effort."

That he has always been particularly interested in outdoor life, and has regretted the lack of better hunting and fishing in Ohio was the assertion made by David S. Ingalls, the "Flying Secretary" of the Navy, referred to by Will Rogers as "the only Republican he would trust with his life."

"The first important thing," he declared, "is to effect better cooperation between farmers and sportsmen, and the next element is to create the same kind of better feeling between these two groups and the governments. Soil, waters and streams and reforestation are of primary importance in consideration of the conservation question."

The youthful aviation chief closed his talk with a discussion of government and asserted it is the fault of the people "if you have such a luxurious government now that you can't support it."

"I believe that occasional wars and subsequent depressions are a good thing, if only because it brings to people a realization of the need for better government. We can be happy and prosperous as long as we demand efficient efficiency of our public officials."

Harry E. Rice, president of the fish and game organization, who acted as master of ceremonies, prefaced his toastmaster duties with a brief talk in which he said the "love for the outdoors and a reverence for nature is born in every man."

Among the notables seated at the speaker's table, whom he introduced but who did not speak, were: Mrs. Myers J. Cooper, who accompanied her husband to Xenia; Mrs. A. C. Messenger, this city, newly-elected regent of the Ohio D. A. R.; Judge Roscoe G. Hornbeck, London, of the second district court of appeals; State Representative Earl Johnson, Painesville, O., who accompanied Mr. Ingalls here; Ralph Harsh, Columbus, state architect; Col. H. S. Wygant, military instructor at Wilberforce University, and Lieut. Harry Rice, Jr., son of H. E. Rice, of the navy.

Vic Donahy, former Democratic governor of Ohio, to whom an invitation had been extended, wired the organization that the state of his health prevented his acceptance. The dinner was prepared by Jacob Kany and served by members of the Eastern Star.

A musical entertainment of matchless excellence preceded the speaking program. The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. W. N. Shank, and throughout the serving of the dinner the O. S. and S. O. Home Cadet Orchestra, under direction of H. F. Seall, furnished music.

Vocal selections were contributed by Mrs. Edna McClelland, this city, who sang two numbers, "Then You'll Remember Me" and "Your Land and My Land"; Joseph Balmer, of the O. S. and S. O. Home, and Miss Eleanor McDonnell, this city, who favored with "I'll be Straying Back to Ireland Some Fine Day" and "That Old Irish Mother of Mine."

A medley of selections was sung by Antonio Papania, noted Italian tenor, who has sung in many cities of the United States and Europe. Jiri Kubelek, a dramatic tenor from Czechoslovakia, who has an extensive repertoire and sings in seven languages, sang three selections in different tongues. He is a relative of a great violinist of the same name. His accompanist, B. J. Balcar, also of Czechoslovakia, played a piano solo.

One of the supplementary features of the orchestra music was an excellent cornet solo by Lieut. George Gates, entitled "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise."

Accompanists were the Misses Helen Hurley and Mary McDonnell, Xenia, and B. J. Balcar.

W. B. McCallister acted as general chairman of arrangements for the affair. St. Patrick's Day appointments were carried out in the table decorations.

The Retail Merchants Association will make final plans for the opening at a meeting in the Rotary Club rooms, second floor, Donges Bldg., Monday at 6 p. m. Plans for revival of the former successful spring "clean-up and paint-up campaigns" in Xenia will be discussed at the meeting which all members are urged to attend.

CHINESE FEAR JAPS REPLACING TROOPS

SHANGHAI, March 18.—The Chinese owned China Press charged today that the Japanese 9th division, withdrawn from the Shanghai area amid public announcements, had been quietly replaced by the 40th division, twice as strong.

The press charged that the 40th division of some 20,000 men had taken over the 9th division positions as part of a Japanese concentration of men and material which would make a large scale offensive possible. The paper voiced the private opinion of prominent Chinese by declaring it was skeptical of the sincerity of Japanese peace overtures.

STUDENT IS HURT

Robert McCartney, Gladly Ave., student of the eighth grade at Central Junior High School, had a cut of the first joint of the first finger on his left hand severed when he caught it in an electric planer in the manual arts department at the school Thursday afternoon. The injury was dressed by Dr. W. T. Ungard.

RUTH CONFIDENT

ST. PETERSBURG, Florida, March 18.—Babe Ruth, who "because of the depression" has agreed to accept a one-year salary of $75,000 equal to that of the President of the United States, expects to have a good season, he said today.

He explained that Wednesday's performance against the Boston Braves in which he failed to hit in six trips to the plate had "no special significance." He plays with the Yankees against the Braves again today.

Two or three games may be required before he gets into his stride, he pointed out, "and then boys, watch my smoke. I'm in swell shape. My batting eye is good, and I've still got the old wallop. There's no reason why I shouldn't have a good year."

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

Sound the tocsin and let there be rejoicing far and wide. Babe Ruth—the most famous hold-out—Babe Ruth—has at last been gathered into the New York Yankees fold.

With appropriate pomp and ceremony, the great slugger and his John Hancock to the dotted line. In consideration of this he will receive only $75,000 for his services this year. Did we say "only"?

The Babe wanted $80,000. His employers wanted to pay him $70,000. And so, after prolonged dickering and columns and columns of the difference and agreed upon $75,000. One concluding thought is the fact the Babe will pay less income tax.

Ruth, who has been on a championship team more times than any other player in ball history, is in tip-top shape as the result of a long siege of winter conditioning. This great big boy, who was with Boston on three occasions when it won the flag, and played for the pennant-winning Yankee squad three times, says he feels "right." Training camp reports say he looks it too.

Down to 220 pounds, Babe is lighter than he has been at this time in any other year. He says he expects to elude plenty of homers and get his share of base hits this season and if appearances mean anything, the Bambino faces a great year.

The renowned Yankee slugger, by the way, can eat only two meals a day, whether training or not. Even at that he must work off extra weight in a gymnasium, confronted by a battery of news reel photographers, during the winter season, in order to keep in trim.

Estimates of the probable number of circuit slashes this year vary, but the fact the ball is less lively may have no effect on him, it didn't last year.

It may be recalled that after the close of the 1930 season, major league club owners decided that home run hitting was becoming too pronounced, and in an effort to restore a more even balance to all phases of the game, it was agreed to eliminate some of the liveliness of the ball.

It is interesting to note that the difference in the ball adopted for 1931 was attested by the reduction in the number of homers. In 1930, players in both big leagues averaged 1,565 circuit drives—892 in the National and 673 in the American League—whereas during 1931 only 1,068 were made—576 in the American and 492 in the National.

Steve Phillips, genial citizen of this city and nationally known starting judge of harness races, has been re-engaged to get the wrigglers away at the Grand Circuit meeting to be held in conjunction with the Indiana state fair in Indianapolis, Ind. next September.

WILBERFORCE BACK WITH EIGHT SCALPS AFTER VISIT SOUTH

Team Victorious In 19
Out Of 21 Games
This Season

With scalps of eight more victims dangling from its collective belt, the Wilberforce College basketball squad is back from a triumphant trip through the Southland, during which the Green Wave won every game it played.

In the eight road games the Wilberforce eagles scored a grand total of 350 points against 187 for the opposition. Individual scoring honors were captured by Matthews, who tallied seventy-three, followed by Bray with seventy and Slinger with sixty-four.

This formidable Wilberforce team has been victorious in nineteen out of twenty-one contests this season, claiming triumphs over some strong independent teams and every college five it has faced. Wilberforce initiated its Southern invasion on Washington's Birthday, celebrating the occasion with a 68 to 39 victory over Kentucky State. On the succeeding two nights Coach Richey's charges registered 33 to 16 and 39 to 22 triumphs over West Kentucky State.

The strong LeMoine College basketball team of Memphis, Tenn., were the next to fall prey to the Ohioans, who won twice over this team by margins of 28 to 15 and 48 to 12.

Fresh from their success in Kentucky and Tennessee, the Wilberforce basketball team continued their winning ways at the expense of an all-star team composed of the St. Louis Argus and the Bon Tons, winning 33 to 24. Next the Kansas City Meteors bowed to the "Force" by a score of 42 to 26.

HIGH SCHOOL COURT TEAMS IN COLUMBUS FOR STATE TOURNEY

Class Of Basketball
Talent To Decide
Ohio Title

COLUMBUS, O., March 18.—The best high school basketball teams in Ohio were assembled here today to begin their brief but furious campaigns for the state scholastic titles.

Eight class A and eight class B schools were matched in the finals of the state's first elimination contest. First round games were to be played today and tonight, and semi-finals were scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

The class A finalists were Pomeroy, Defiance, Akron West, Zanesville, Dayton Fairmont, Columbus North and Dayton Stivers. The class B contenders were Garrettsville, Rossford, Margaretta of Castalia, Dayton Fairmont, Ostrander, North Canton, Stewart and Sugar Creek.

Hundreds of loyal but anxious fans accompanied these teams to the state fairgrounds coliseum to offer spiritual support. The teams which have been accorded the best chance to win the class A title are Akron West, Columbus North, Zanesville and Dayton Stivers. The class B favorites are Garrettsville, Dayton Fairmont and Ostrander.

They are favored on the strength of their records for the season, an uncertain basis for determining what will happen in such an important tournament. It is not unusual for a surprise team to develop from the lesser ranks.

Pairings for the first round games today follow:
Class A—Defiance vs Pomeroy; Akron West vs Zanesville; Akron East vs Ashland; Columbus North vs Dayton Stivers.

Class B—Garrettsville vs Rossford; Dayton Fairmont vs Castalia; Stewart vs Sugar Creek; Ostrander vs North Canton.

Of the teams in the state tournament, only Dayton Stivers and Zanesville ever have won the state basketball title.

The annual foul shooting contest will be held in connection with the tournament, Saturday night.

REDS CHEERED AS HERMAN COMES EAST

TAMPA, Fla., March 18.—More and more this gigantic trade with the Brooklyn Dodgers is having a cheering effect upon Cincinnati baseball followers.

Babe Herman, the big batsman from California, is on his way to the Reds camp, apparently ready to sign a Cincinnati contract and play baseball.

Wally Gilbert, third baseman, and Ernie Lombardi, catcher, obtained from Brooklyn went through their first workout with the Reds Thursday and appeared ready to play. Manager Dan Howley said he would use them in games with the Yankees and the Athletics on Saturday and Sunday.

A practice game was scheduled for today in preparation for the title with the American League leaders over the week-end.

FAILS TO PAY FINE; SENTENCED TO JAIL

Because of his failure to fulfill a promise to pay a fine of $200 and costs assessed last January 12 when he pleaded guilty to possessing liquor, J. M. Liles, Jamestown, was committed to jail Thursday by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith.

Following a raid on his home in which thirty-five quarts of home brew beer and three gallons of wine were confiscated, Liles was freed by Judge Smith on his agreement to pay the fine and costs by March 15. When he defaulted in payment, Judge Smith issued a citation for his arrest and he was sent to jail Thursday.

REPORTS OHIO FISH HAVE WANDERLUST

COLUMBUS, O., March 18.—Ohio fish have the wanderlust, according to Conservation Commissioner William H. Reinhart.

As an experiment to determine the migration habits of the finny tribe, the state conservation department tagged a small mouth black bass, taken from North Bass Lake Erie, and released it in Stillwater River, Dayton, last November. A Cincinnati fisherman caught the same fish a few weeks ago near Rising Sun, Ind., on the Ohio River. The fish had traveled 113 miles in less than four months.

Bowling

A scheduled Krippendorf League bowling match between the Flex-Welt and Flex-Mode teams Thursday night was postponed by mutual agreement, and may be played off in the form of a double-header during the next round of play. It is also expected that the match between the Arch-O-Pedic and Foot-Beat quintets Friday night may also be cancelled.

BLAIR IN MONEY

VANDALIA, O., March 18.—The 16-year St. Patrick's Day trapshoot was won by Joe Hiestand, Hillsboro, O., who broke ninety-nine out of 100 targets. H. A. Blair, Springfield, O., won class C honors with ninety-five out of 100.

candidates for governor and a former Democratic state director of agriculture, politics, was relegated to the backround in the speech-making, and the sportsman's organization heard the conservation problem analyzed from all angles.

First speaker on the program was Dr. Glenn Adams, Cincinnati, widely known authority on birds and dogs, whose weekly radio broadcasts over station WLW are heard by thousands of listeners.

Dr. Adams, secretary of "More Game Birds in Ohio," a foundation composed of farmers, sportsmen and conservationists interested in having more game birds, including pheasant, Hungarian partridge, grouse, duck and quail, declared he had been broadcasting for five years and derived much enjoyment from his radio talks. He spoke of the desirability of more game bird laws in Ohio.

Referring to the fact that it was during his administration that Ohio's first conservation law was enacted, former Governor Cooper stressed the importance of conservation to the well-being of the state.

He recalled that the first conservation law, providing for a division of conservation, with a bi-partisan board with full authority to appropriate all funds allocated to this division, marked a decided step toward removing conservation from politics and heading the state in the direction of a real program of lasting benefit to the people. Cooper said in part:

"Ohio is rich in natural resources, the accumulated wealth of ages. The time has come when we must preserve and protect the natural heritages. For many years we have been considering the question of conservation in the light of constructive legislation; but somehow there was always the element of suspicion, of misunderstanding and distrust, which made any legislative action impossible. The failure to find common ground for co-operation has been tremendously costly to the state.

"Then too, we have been wanting in a plan of sufficient breadth and comprehensiveness to form a base for challenging the attention and interest of the people to a great cause. This has resulted in a waste of natural resources, inherited blessings, without any real regard to the responsibility which we owe to succeeding generations. Forests have been ruthlessly destroyed. Our streams have been polluted, menacing health of our citizens, resulting in great destruction of fish. Little regard has been given to the protection and propagation of wild life. And we have been going along without any definite program for the development of a real park system in Ohio."

Substituting for Governor George White, who could not attend because of the press of legislative problems, former State Director of Agriculture Charles V. Truax, who was largely responsible for the establishment of the Xenia fish hatchery, conveyed the governor's regrets and said the chief executive hopes to accomplish all conservation possible in Ohio.

"Just at present, however, Governor White is equally interested in the conservation of human welfare, hence the decision to convene the legislature into extraordinary session to enact relief measures," Truax declared.

The former director reminded the sportsmen's organization that it was during his term of office that the angler's license law was enacted in 1925; that eight large fish hatcheries were built during the next three years and that the Lake Erie headquarters was "purchased to distribute consignments of fish and restock streams in all parts of Ohio."

"During my six years of my incumbency we released thousands of pheasants and other game birds and the fruits of our efforts are seen today. Only one other state surpasses Ohio in the number of hunting and fishing licenses annually sold, and only one state exceeds Ohio in the amount of receipts. Ohio need not take a back seat in the matter of conservation."

"I would be derelict in my duty if I failed to point out the importance of conservation of Ohio farms and citizenship, which furnish the grounds on which we hunt and the streams in which we fish."

Discussing economic conditions, the speaker advocated a moratorium for farmers, asserting that "so long as the farmers are bankrupt, so long as they are unable to borrow money to refinance their farms, so long will the country remain in the condition it finds itself today."

The declaration that "we are searching for a remedy in conservation, not only in hunting and fishing, but in water as well," was made by Secretary of State Brown. Conservation, he explained, means something more than mere sports and its attendant thrills; it means recreation, too, and conservation of our worth while natural resources.

Picuring in years to come an unfailing water supply the year around, the state official said that this will avert the disaster that comes with drought.

"Water and wild game conservation go hand in hand; the two are linked inseparably together," he asserted. "Eventually we will also have more of nature's beauty opened to the public."

"In order to make conservation a living, vibrant thing, we must have a long-time program. It must be free of politics, free of frequent changes of administering officials to bring this about. The farmers and sportsmen of Ohio must be organized and stand together. It will be worth the effort."

That he has always been particularly interested in outdoor life, and has regretted the lack of better hunting and fishing in Ohio was the assertion made by David S. Ingalls, the "Flying Secretary" of the Navy, referred to by Will Rogers as "the only Republican he would trust with his life."

operation between farmers and sportsmen, and the next element is to create the same kind of better feeling between these two groups and the governments. Soil, waters and streams and reforestation are of primary importance in consideration of the conservation question."

The youthful aviation chief closed his talk with a discussion of government and asserted it is the fault of the people "if you have such a luxurious government now that you can't support it."

"I believe that occasional wars and subsequent depressions are a good thing, if only because it brings to people a realization of the need for better government. We can be happy and prosperous as long as we demand more efficiency of our public officials."

Harry E. Rice, president of the fish and game association, who acted as master of ceremonies, preface his toastmaster duties with a brief talk in which he said the "love for the outdoors and a reverence for nature is born in every man."

Among the notables seated at the speaker's table, whom he introduced but who did not speak, were: Mrs. Myers V. Cooper, who accompanied her husband to Xenia; Mrs. A. C. Messinger, this city, newly-elected regent of the Ohio D. A. B.; Judge Roscoe G. Hornbeck, London, of the second district Court of Appeals; State Representative Earl Johnson, Painesville, O., who accompanied him; Ralph Harsh, Columbus, state architect; Col. H. S. Wygant, military instructor at Wilberforce University, and Lieut. Harry Rice, Jr., son of H. E. Rice, of the navy.

Gov. Donahoe, former Democratic governor of Ohio, to whom an invitation had been extended, wired the organization that the state of his health prevented his acceptance. The dinner was prepared by Jacob Kany and served by members of the Eastern Star.

A musical entertainment of matchless excellence preceded the speaking program. The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. W. N. Shank, and throughout the serving of the dinner the O. S. and S. O. Home Cadet Orchestra, under direction of H. F. Seall, furnished music.

Vocal selections were contributed by Mrs. Edna McClelland, this city, who sang "The Sunshower," "You'll Remember Me" and "Your Land My Land"; Joseph Balmer, of the O. S. and S. O. Home, and Miss Eleanor McDonnell, this city, who favored with "I'll be Straying Back to Ireland Some Fine Day" and "That Old Irish Mother of Mine."

A medley of selections was sung by Antonio Papania, noted Italian tenor, who has sung in many cities of the United States and Europe. Jiri Kubelik, a dramatic tenor from Czechoslovakia, who has an extensive repertoire and sings in seven languages, sang three selections in different tongues. He is a relative of a great violinist of the same name. His accompanist, B. J. Balcar, also of Czechoslovakia, played a piano solo.

One of the supplementary features of the orchestra music was an excellent cornet solo by Lieut. George Gates, entitled "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise." The accompanists were the Misses Helen Hurley and Mary McDonnell, Xenia, and B. J. Balcar.

W. B. McCallister acted as general chairman of arrangements for the affair. St. Patrick's Day appointments were carried out in the table decorations.

OUTSIDER VICTOR IN STEEPLECHASE

AINTREE, Liverpool, England, Mar. 18.—Forbes, an outsider, won the Grand National Steeplechase today in a heart-breaking race in which favorites were downed one by one in the gruelling course.

Egremont was second and Shaun Goillis, a previous winner, was third.

B. B. F. TEAM WINS
Displaying superior form in all departments, the B. B. F. independent basketball team of Xenia has ended its season in a successful manner with a 23 to 8 victory over the Xenia Grange quintet. The contest was played at Central High School gymnasium last week.

SPRING OPENING

A spring opening of Xenia retail stores is planned by the Xenia Retail Merchants Association for next Wednesday night.

Merchants will make a special display of new spring merchandise and invite visitors that evening until 9 o'clock. In a departure from previous practice, clerks will be on duty and the stores participating will all accept purchases.

Coupons, which entitle the holder to receive prizes later, will be given away in all participating stores and additional coupons may be obtained with each purchase of fifty cents or more. The prize winners will be announced by the individual stores on the day following the opening.

The Retail Merchants Association will make final plans for the opening at a meeting in the Rotary Club rooms, second floor, Donges Bldg., Monday at 6 p. m. Plans for revival of the former successful spring "clean-up and paint-up campaigns" in Xenia will be discussed at the meeting which will also be urged to attend.

CHINESE FEAR JAPS REPLACING TROOPS

SHANGHAI, March 18.—The Chinese owned China Press charged today that the Japanese 9th division, withdrawn from the Shanghai area amid public announcements, had been quietly replaced by the 40th division, twice as strong.

The press charged that the 40th division of some 20,000 men had taken over the 9th division positions as part of a Japanese concentration of men and material which would make a large scale offensive possible. The paper voiced the private opinion of prominent Chinese by declaring it was skeptical of the sincerity of Japanese peace overtures.

STUDENT IS HURT

Robert McCartney, Gladys Ave., student of the eighth grade at Central Junior High School, had half of the first joint of the first finger on his left hand severed when he caught it in an electric planer in the manual arts department at the school Thursday afternoon. The injury was dressed by Dr. W. T. Ungard.

RUTH CONFIDENT

ST. PETERSBURG, Florida, March 18.—Babe Ruth, who "because of the depression" has agreed to accept a one-year salary of $75,000 equal to that of the President of the United States, expects to have a good season, he said today.

He explained that Wednesday's performance against the Boston Braves in which he failed to hit in six trips to the plate had "no special significance." He plays with the Yankees against the Braves again today.

Two or three games may be required before he gets into his stride, he pointed out, "and then boys, watch my smoke. I'm in swell shape. My batting eye is good, and I've still got the old wallop. There's no reason why I shouldn't have a good year."

Upper left, a picture hat in leghorn straw combined with eyelet batiste with brown patent leather pipings; right, navy rough straw with white velvet bow. Below, left, a bathing cap that looks like hair; right, brown straw with white velvet crown, worn with a ribbed velvet suit.

HOW TO MAKE TAX RETURN UNDER NEW LAW

Several general questions which are daily asked of the taxing authorities by taxpayers who are in the midst of making out their returns, are answered by the following bulletin from the State Tax Commission:

Q. How can I list property not previously reported, without being liable for back taxes?

A. The new law expressly provides for immunity in this case. The law continues the power of the county auditor to call in any person for examination as to omitted property or false return, and applies this authority to the five year period from 1926 to 1931. But any person who makes a return in 1932 may apply to the state tax commission, and if the commission finds that he listed all of his taxable property fully and in good faith this year, it shall give him a certificate rendering him immune from examination and from criminal prosecution. This is one of the broadest and most important sections of the new law. It embodies the state's policy of a new deal in taxation. The making of an honest return this year wipes the slate clean. But the return must be made this year. The application for immunity then may be made at any time in the future, whenever examination in the individual case may be started by the auditor.

Taxpayers may apply for certificates of immunity, however, without being cited for examination, and in such cases the tax commission will use every facility to act upon the applications at the present time. Applications for immunity from back taxes assessed on the 1931 duplicate must be made by April 1.

Q. How can I determine the value of an unproductive investment?

A. By the market value as of January 1, 1932. In the case of listed securities, this is the market quotation of the date nearest to January 1. In the case of unlisted securities, (1) known transactions and (2) book valuation, may be used as the basis of value. In the absence of these sources of market value, the taxpayer's own knowledge, of conditions, governing such prices as is believed may be obtained from a willing buyer, not at forced sale, is a factor.

It should be borne in mind that returns of the same issue of securities may be made by other taxpayers, and that all are subject to check against statistical records, and this, together with the fact that such investments are taxed on their market value at only 20 cents per $100, should guide the taxpayer in placing a conscientious value upon his unproductive investments.

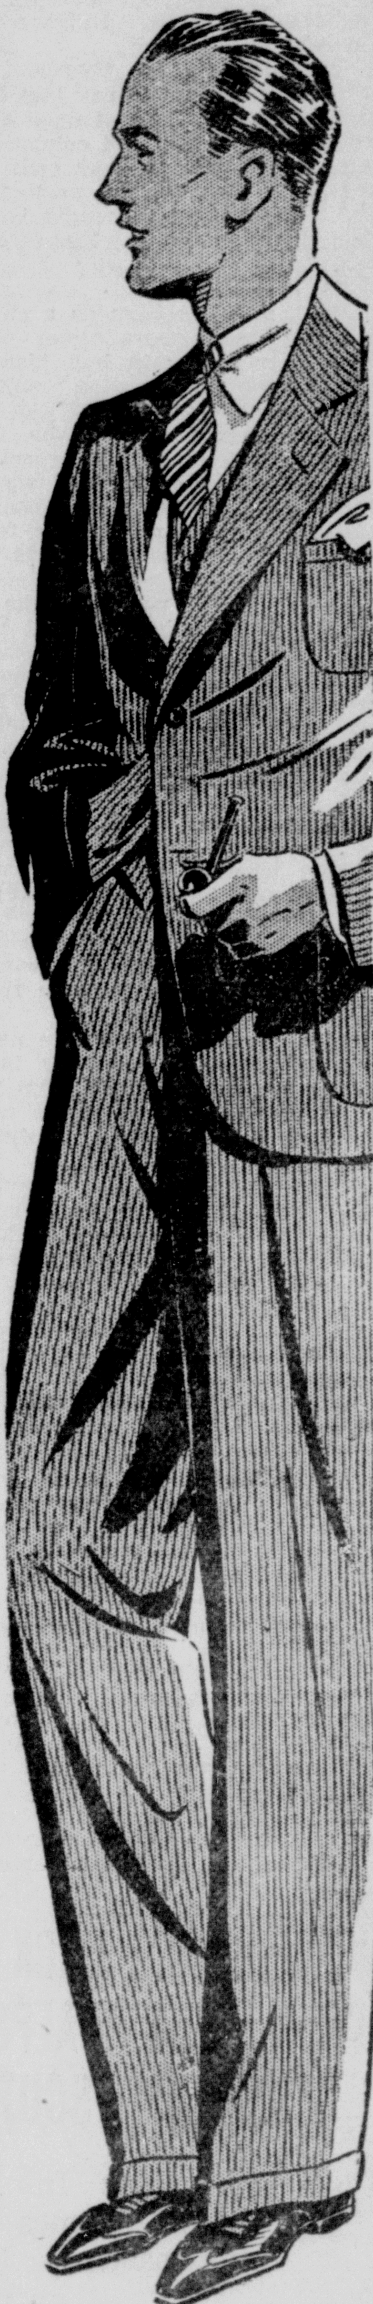

Q. How is tangible personal property to be valued?

A. In view of the fact that the taxpayer is now legally given the advantage of a reduction of 30 to 50 per cent in the valuation upon which the tax on taxable personal property is finally computed, the law provides that such property shall be listed at its present true value, not at valuations at which it may have been returned under the old law. Otherwise, the property would be assessed at only 50 or 70 per cent of its former valuation. The public revenue would suffer accordingly in the localities where the valuations were low. The true value is the prevailing price as of January 1, in the case of such property as domestic animals and farm products and machinery; and depreciated book value where available.

Q. How are taxes equalized throughout the state?

A.—The new law is administered by the state tax commission, through the county auditors and deputy assessors, not by local assessors as heretofore. The commission will inspect all the returns in excess of $5,000, and may call upon the auditor for returns under that figure, for inspection and as-

When the Southerners, a colored male quartet, appears on its regular program Sunday morning at 10 o'clock it will have as its guest artist, Moses Allen, 106-year-old colored preacher. Moses, who says he cannot read or write, will appear in an impromptu role before the microphone. He appeared before the microphone two months ago. This program is not available through a Cincinnati station but may be heard through WHAS, Louisville and WTAM Cleveland.

ARRANGE MEETING OF REVOLUTIONARY SHORT TRAIL GROUP

Official call for the first regular meeting of the Revolutionary Short Trail Association to be held at the Clark County Court House in Springfield, Thursday, March 24, has been issued to citizens of Findlay, Arlington, Williamstown, Dunkirk, Bellefontaine, West Liberty, Urbana, Springfield, Yellow Springs, Xenia, Spring Valley, Waynesville, Lebanon, Mason, Sharonville and intermediate communities.

Hotel Shawnee will be association headquarters. A luncheon meeting will be held at the hotel at 12 o'clock at which all representatives from the above communities are invited and expected to attend. A business session of the group will be called to order at 1:30 o'clock.

The association was brought into existence at a mass meeting in Urbana February 24, when representative citizens from ten communities assembled to discuss the advisability of effecting an organization to actively promote the advantages of a cross-state highway from Toledo to Cincinnati via Findlay, Kenton, Bellefontaine, Urbana, Springfield, Xenia, Lebanon and Sharonville.

A name for the organization was selected and permanent officers were elected.

MAY NAME SUCCESSOR
COLUMBUS, O., March 18. — Governor White today was attempting to determine the physical condition of State Director of Agriculture I. S. Guthery, who has been ill at his home in Larue, O., for several weeks, with the intention of naming a successor to Guthery if necessary.

By GEORGE McMANUS

REAR THIS FIRST:
Lillian Abbott, daughter of a wealthy New England family, decides she is tired of the social whirl and wants a career. She decides on the movies and after exchange of correspondence with the head of a movie employment agency, one Thomas Blane, runs away from home and accompanies him to New York from Salem, taking with her her savings. After registering in a New York hotel Blane leaves her, taking with him her money and a diamond ring. She had repulsed his advances. Lillian goes to the hotel grill for dinner, listens to the orchestra and slips out of the room after giving the waiter her room number for him to charge the check. The next morning Lillian reads the account of her disappearance in the papers. The hotel manager calls her to his office and there Lillian confesses she has no money, but she does not tell him her story. The manager, Howard Marsh, agrees to let her stay for two weeks in exchange for her watch, an expensive timepiece. She attempts to find a job as a model that day but is turned down everywhere. "Business is bad," she is told. Back at the hotel Marsh invites her out for dinner. Marsh takes her to a night club and they have a gay time. He offers her a job but does not tell her what it is.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 18
HOWARD MARSH had many friends. They came over to his corner table. It was obvious that they came to be introduced to Lillian—and it was obvious that Howard enjoyed presenting them to her.

Every man who came over asked Lillian for a dance.

And after receiving a nod from Howard several times when asked she began accepting their invitations without looking over at her escort.

Most of them danced well. Some of them held her too tight. Some of them smelled of liquor.

One named Donald asked: "What's your phone number, baby?"

She pretended not to hear.

"Got a date tonight?" he persisted. "No," snapped Lillian.

"Well, you have now. We'll step out—after you're through here."

What did he mean? After she was through?

"Don't spill it to Howard Marsh. You're his date, I know. But when he takes you home I'll telephone you, see?"

The music stopped then and Lillian was grateful.

She hurried back to the table where Howard Marsh sat. She didn't wait for her partner to pull out her chair. She loathed him and the familiar way he held her while they danced.

Lillian busied herself with the delicious lobster on her plate. She kept her face averted. She didn't want Howard to see she was angry, humiliated. He couldn't see the twist of her red lips and the angry, thoughtful expression in her dark eyes.

"Are you enjoying yourself?" he asked pleasantly.

"The music is wonderful. I'm having a grand time," she forced enthusiasm into her voice.

It wasn't exactly forced. She was having a grand time. There with him. She liked him. She was drawn to him. She felt there was something likable about him—and the woman in her craved for more proof that he also was attracted.

Lillian was not yet aware of her power. She had no idea of how to employ the vast power of her dark beauty.

But this was a novelty to Howard Marsh.

His air of worldliness, his handsome wholeness had brought girls clustering about him. His winning personality had done much to make him a success as a New York hotel manager.

Here was a girl who liked him but had no cunning. Her eyes were fresh and clear. Her attitude something entirely different. Howard Marsh didn't quite know what to do about a girl like that.

He had decided he was going to give her a chance. Anyway, it was a job, and jobs were hard for a girl to find in New York.

There had been one thing worrying him. Could she take care of herself?

He had watched young Donald dancing with her. He had a fairly accurate idea of what had been said.

"I liked the way you handled Don," he said to Lillian out of a clear sky.

Lillian looked her surprise.

"I liked the way you held your poise. Everything under control." "I—I didn't think you noticed." "I noticed." She felt somehow rewarded.

"Would you like some wine?" he asked.

"No—but don't let me stop you. I never drink."

DAUGHERTY SUED BY WARD; WANTS MONEY

WASHINGTON, C. H., O., Mar. 18.—In a suit filed here yesterday Paul Hixon asked that Mal S. Daugherty, former banker, be compelled to make an accounting and to pay the money due Hixon. The petition alleged that Daugherty was named Hixon's guardian in 1920, after the latter's legs had been cut off in a railroad accident and he had received a large cash settlement.

The guardianship terminated in 1923, when Hixon became of age, according to the petition which also said Daugherty had $8,418 of his money. Daugherty was alleged to have filed an accounting in 1923, and continued as Hixon's agent.

Hixon claimed he received sums of money from Daugherty, but did not know the exact total. He stated that Daugherty refused to make an accounting.

Why FAT Piles Up

Modern science has discovered a great cause. A certain gland grows weak, usually after 30. Then foods which once fed energy go largely to fat. People slow down and gain weight. Doctors, the world over, now combat that cause. People who consult them are keeping slender now.

The factor they use is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets, at small cost. People have used them for 24 years—millions of boxes of them. In almost every circle you see the results.

No starvation is advised. Marmola supplies the factor needed to turn food to vim. As the extra fat goes, new energy returns. Go learn what Marmola means to you. At all druggists—$1.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs. At fifty, you can be in your prime. Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years? There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways. This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive. Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.
